Rather Rough on the Missionary.

Some two years ago, according to a Pittsburg paper, George Bovard and Clara Shaffer became ongaged, at Mercer. He went to India as a missionary, whence he wrote for her to come to him and he married. He had no money to pay he: expenses and she had none. merchant of Mercer, and he being a big-hearted man, with generous impulses, offered to supply her with what money she needed to reach her far-off lover. She gladly accepted his offer, and at once began her preparations for the long journey. "Dick" and Miss Shaff r were thrown much together, for a while, and about the time she was ready to start he was deeply in love with h r himself. But he said nothing, and she sterred for New York with enough of 'D ck's" money in her pocket to take her to Judia. Two or three days after her depar ture he grew despondent, and chided himself for having given away his chance for marrying Miss Shaffer himself. A thought struck him, and that was to follow ber, and if possible overtake her before she boarded a steamer in New York for distant India. He acted promptly on the thought, took the cars, reached New York, and found the vessel on which she was to sail.

Miss Shaffer was already on board. He made koown his effection, asked her for her hand for himself, was accepted, and the two returned to

Mercer a few days ago as man and wife.

MAGIC IN THE PARLOR,-This trick shou'd always be the concluding one of a performance. as will be seen. Place on a table, in full view of the sp. clators, the house cage of canaries, a chafing dish and a salver covered by a plain white handkerchief, and a lighted candle of green wax. Pass the salver around, asking each of the guest to place on the haudkerchief a coic, gold if possible, after marking the same so as to be redily recognized, if he should ever see it again. While tying up the handkerchief say "come in" in a loud voice. Everybody will lock at the door, when you can slip the bag into your pocket, substituting another handkerwith broken chins. Light some spirits in the chafing dish dropping the supposed c in into the flames, into which you also throw six embroider d bankerchiefs and three ivory fans, collected from the audience. Next, out off the caparies' heads and ram them into a horse pistol, which fire at the chafing dish over which you have previously placed an inlaid box with a double false lid and dummy hinges. Then, requesting the audience to waten the box sharply, so that there may be no deception, you pass into the next room, where your confederate awaits you with your hat and ulster. Rapidly assuming these, you decend together through the kitchen, and leaving by the alley gate proceed at once to the depot and take the train to some remote village, where you uivide, This is the host gobling trick known .- San Francisco Post

TO KEEP LAMP CHIMNEYS FROM CRACK-ING .- The following recipe for keeping lamp c nuneys from cracking is taken from the Diamord, a Liepziej jurnal devoted to the glass interest: Place your tamblers, chimneys or vessels which you desire to keep from cracking in a pot filled with cold water; add a little cook ing sal; ellow the mix ure to boil well over a fire, and then cool slowly. Glass treated in this. way is said not to crack even if exposed to very sadden chacces of temperature. Unimneys are said to become very durable by this process, which may also be extended to crockery, stone ware, porcelain, etc. The process is simply one of annealing, and the slower the process, erp cially the cooling portion of it, the more efficiive will be the work.

The present period seems to by fertile in the production of a lot sappy youths, who are devoted to neckties; who have not strength, honor, nor manliners enough to make love to a young girl; who would not dare to take the responsibility of supporting a wife, but who c osider that they gain some reflected glory by making one of the trail of worshippers that dig the steps of any woman who attains distinction or notoriety.

"What did you get," asked a wife of her husband, on his return from a hunting excursion of several days' duration. "I got back," he sententiously replied.
